The Fortieth Anniversary of CSUS

Capital Collegian

CALIFORNIA STATE UNIVERSITY, SACRAMENTO

California State University, Sacramento is California's Capital Campus

CSUS, one of the major members of the nation's largest system of senior public higher education, is celebrating its fortieth year of providing quality education.

CSUS's unique location in California's capital city, setting the University apart from other collegiate institutions, contributes immeasurably to the learning experience of the University's students. The budget of the State of California, when compared to the nations of the world, ranks among the top five. Much of this budget is administered in downtown Sacramento, five miles west of the CSUS campus.

The proximity of CSUS enhances the educational process in several ways: internships, part-time employment and career opportunities are readily available to students; and the many part-time faculty members bring to the CSUS classrooms the relevance of their concurrent professional employment in the governmental process.

Unlike some colleges surrounded by an "ivy-covered" wall, CSUS is a college without walls! The University, its students, faculty and staff share a close working relationship with the community.

The greater Sacramento area, with approximately 1.3 million residents, is one of the fastest growing metropolitan communities of its size in the nation. The reasons for this growth include healthy employment rates and economic development, and a high quality of life.

CSUS's central location in the community and freeway proximity make it one of the most accessible of the 19 CSU campuses to both private and public transportation. Most sites in the greater Sacramento area can be reached in less than one-half hour from the campus doorstep. The Sierra-Tahoe recreational areas and the many historic, cultural and recreational sites of San Francisco are only a two-hour drive from the campus.

CSUS Offers

A Beautiful Campus Setting

The location of the CSUS campus, located alongside the historic American River on the eastern edge of Sacramento, is as vital now as it was more than 100 years ago when the site served as the western trailhead for the Pony Express. Originally housed on the campus of the Sacramento Junior College, the University moved to its present site of nearly 300 acres in 1955. The tree-studded campus, with over 25 buildings, has an enrollment of more than 24,000 students. Projected enrollment increases have prompted a flurry of planned facility developments in the next few years, including a new engineering building, a five-story classroom building, a major library addition, a new children's center, a second story addition to the bookstore, and a multi-level parking garage. Also planned is a major addition to the residence halls, currently housing more than 1,000 single students in facilities among the most attractive in California public higher education.

An important adjunct to the campus is the Aquatics Center, located on Lake Natomas, ten miles east of the campus. The center provides water sports safety classroom instruction and recreational activities and since 1985 has served as the host of the prestigious Pacific Coast Rowing Championships.

CSUS's Student Life-Activities, Services, Opportunities!

"Something for everyone—and more!" truly reflects the variety of activities available to CSUS students both on campus and in the community.

The Associated Students, Inc. (ASI) provides the framework for many campus based activities. Operating on a budget of nearly $1 million dollars a year, ASI sponsors a variety of activities and services, including recreational outings, a bike shop, child care center, community garden and an aquatics center.

The University Union is the center of campus activity. The Union provides food service options, from a snack to a full course meal, recreational activities and a place to relax or study between classes. A continuous variety of free entertainment is conducted in the Union including concerts, films, performing arts, speakers, dances, etc.

Also found on the CSUS campus are over 150 student organizations including cultural, departmental/professional, service, recreational, fraternities and sororities, honorary, religious and special interest groups.

Residence hall students have their own activity program, complemented by lighted tennis and basketball courts, swimming pool and sauna. If that's not enough, students can walk across the Guy West Bridge to the several coffeehouses along University Avenue, take in a Sacramento Kings game at Arco Arena, visit the Railroad Museum, History Center and Crocker Art Gallery in downtown Sacramento or participate in the night life in "Old Sacramento."

"Something for Everyone—and More!"

CSUS Offers

Athletics for Both Spectators and Participants

Intercollegiate and intramural athletics are an important part of campus life at CSUS. In the near future, all intercollegiate athletics will be Division 1 (except football). The facilities are among the best in the area. CSUS offers scholarships to men in Basketball, Baseball, and Football and to women in Basketball, Softball, and Volleyball.

"The Big Game Is a Series of Events, Parties, and Festivities."

CSUS Enrolls

A Rich and Diverse Blend of Students

CSUS students come from every "nook and cranny" of the community, from across the state and nation, and from throughout the world. The University provides students from these very diverse backgrounds with a rare opportunity to interact with each other intellectually, culturally and socially in a collegiate setting.

More than 100 nations are represented in the University's student community. Likewise, a number of CSUS students enroll at cooperating overseas universities, and earn credit toward degree objectives, as part of the prestigious California State University International Programs.

The University is continuing and strengthening its attempts to attract and retain students from ethnic minority, low income, and other backgrounds traditionally underrepresented in higher education. This "educational equity" effort involves the entire University community. Offices providing specific assistance to non-traditional students include: Student Affirmative Action, the Educational Opportunity Program, Students with Disabilities, and CAMP. Their efforts are supplemented by specific advising and academic preparation programs provided by the faculty.

Although over ninety percent of the approximately 1500 new freshmen are nineteen years old or younger the average student age remains in the mid-20's. The PASAR program serves the increasing number of older students who are "re-entering", often after a long lapse in their education.

There's a Lot Going On at CSUS

CSUS's Instructional Programs Offer Academic Challenges and Opportunities

The strength of the University's instructional program is the commitment of its faculty to teaching and undergraduate education. Full professors, teaching at all class levels, bring with them just the right blend of theoretical training and professional experience.

CSUS students are not lost in a vast educational machine as is often the case at many other large collegiate institutions. The University's reputation of "Big, but not too big" is well illustrated in the classroom. Class size is less than what would be expected in a university the size of CSUS. More than 85% of the classes enroll less than 30 students, while more than 97% enroll less than 50 students.
